"But," says the Yin Lun, a Chinese treatise on money, "though they commenced at a higher rate than the foreign dollars, in a short process of time they sank greatly below the standard, whilst the foreign money preserved its original degree of purity." It will be seen, therefore, that all attempts to coin money in the precious metals in Caina have failed ignominiously. Even the standard of the common cash could not be preserved. These coins have, as is well known, degenerated to such a - degree that their value has fallen from 1,000 to 1,200 and often 1,300 to the dollar. But it must be borne in mind that all efforts made to introduce a silver coinage have been of a spasmodic nature; and the task has never been undertaken by the Imperial Government. Then, again, the establishment of a gold currency would be a great change, the effects of which could not be altogether foreseen, and it would on that ground probably be opposed by the cautious and conservative Chinese. Whichever scheme involves the least change in the existing condition of finance will be certain to resommend itself most strongly to the Imperial Government: All business calculations in China are made on the basis of the tael. Mr. Justice Blackburn has not as yet resigned his Judgeship in the Court of Queen's Beach Division, and although the appointment, with that of Lord Advocate Gordon, has been made, it will not take effect until the 1st of November, when the Appellate Jurisdiction Act will come into force. The three Judges transferred to the Court of Appeal—Baron Bramwell, Mr. Justice Brett, and Buron Amphlett—will gain each about £500 a year by the appointment, as, in the event of being required to proceed on Circuit, the expenses are to be allowed, and they are estimated at about £500 a year, now payable out of the salary of £5,000. In regard to the stature of ladies I cannot find much difference, and for fine, matronly fram s, the average is as great here as on the other side. There has been some talk of the influence of your climate carrying you back to the North American type. I cannot say that I can see any signs of that unless it be in the development of that virtue of hospitality which prevails among all savages. I have visited your wigwims-and THE SECOND COLONIAL SEA AND they are pretty good wigwams too. at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. NOH comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature, Both the Court and Punti pronumentions are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typodisplays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration.

Dhalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chiness Dictionary about 100,000, whilst Macao Mr. L. The public is reminded that, in China and Japan, there is no such thing as Parcel Post. Much trouble and disappointment is caused by persistant attempts to send small valuable trifles through the Post. Fans, Curios, Articles of Dress, Fancy Work, and similar presents are continually being refused, the senders having often spent more in Postage than would have paid the freight by steamer. No refund can be made on such purcels of the value of Stamps obliterated before the nature of the contents was discovered.

PATTERNS. Some difficulty is experienced in obtaining a general understanding of what is a Pattern. It is a bond fuls sample of goods which the sender bas for sale, or of goods which he wishes to order. It is to consist of the smallest possible quantity compatible with abowing what the goods are, and must have no intrinsic value.

In a single year, in the province of Vologd, 14,000 head of lirge cattle and 35,000 of small were killed by wolves. It is true that a province in Russia is as big as a principality elsewhere. Vologda consists of 854,000 square versts, and a verst is more than half a mile. but still such wholesale slaughter must be estimated in its importance, not by statistics Mall and Regent-street entirely to himself, of extent but of population, and many Russinn districts are proverbially destitute of inhabitants. In another department—that of Kazan-the annual sacrifice to these wild beasts was estimated at 5,000 cattle and 25,000 sheep, in value about a quarter of a million of roubles, while the whole population from whom this tribute was lovied was less than two millions. In 45 Russian governments, in a single year, 800 head of cattle were deslroyed, giving a loss to the country of more than a million sterling. The pamphlet gives many interesting details connected with wolves and their peculiarities, and specially mentions the danger that arises out of their favourite trick of pretending to be dead. It mentions one well authenticated story as an instance. A peasant found a wounded wolf. attacked, and killed him. Believing the animal to be quite dead, he threw the carcase into his sledge and brought it home for the sake of the fur, but in the night the wolf attacked and killed him. The terocity of the animal is coupled with very extraordinary powers of appetite. The average Russian wolf would not weigh more than a hundred weight, and yet four of them would amongst them consume a horse. They are estimated to be spread over Russia to the number of about 170,000, and the returns show that more than 200 peasants annually fall victims to their attacks. Their consumption of cattle would best be illustrated by a comparison of losses gustained by cartle plagues. fires, and other canses, and the proportion given is that of 200 to 240. It might seem easier to legislate against an animal than against an epidemic, but the number of wolves in Russia shows as yet no diminution. Sometimes it is attempted to poison them wholesale, and hunts are occasionally got up to release a district that has been specially assailed by them. In these days of speculation monarchs are not likely to take payment of their revenues in such negative values as Alfred the Great accepted from his Welsh subjects: The seal and the grebs have been pretty instead of a beast, he would by this time have become a rara aris. Unfortunately for the Russian peasantry, wolves' fur is comcommerce.—Globe.
